Why Annual Health Assessments are important for people with intellectual disability

- High levels of unrecognised disease & when recognised poorly managed
- Avoidable morbidity & morality

Why

- Profound devaluing & complexity
- Poor health access communication, speaking up & heard
- Poor healthcare and disability support knowledge, skills & attributes
- Limited capacity of disability & health providers
- Poor integration between systems

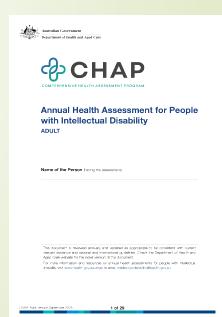

Why CHAP?

- Highest level of evidence i.e. RCTs
- Proven to work in Australia GP setting
 - NO other assessment tools / processes proven to improve health outcome in Australian context
- Freely available from Dept Health & Aged Care
- Up-dated yearly
- Two versions
 - ► Young Person 12–18-year-olds
 - Adult

It's Doctor Time! for General Practice staff and other medical professionals

It's Doctor Timel is a campaign by Inclusion Australia to encourage more people with intellectual disability to have a Medicare-supported Annual Health Assessment. GPs sometimes call these Annual Health Assessments.

As a GP, practice staff or other medical professional you can support people with intellectual disability to get their yearly health check.

As part of the It's Doctor Time! campaign, we have made the following resources for General Practice staff and other medical professionals treating people with intellectual disability.
